Aviation, aerospace and transportation are heavily regulated industries that are driven by complex and evolving technologies and equipment. Companies in these industries rely on advisors with the ability to provide a multidisciplinary approach to the unique challenges they face. Our attorneys know these industries and have deep experience across a broad range of aviation, aerospace and transportation law.

We assist a diverse range of clients that include airlines, leasing companies, major aerospace and defense clients, airport operators, financiers, cargo and freight companies, and warehousing support operations. We are regularly involved in the most complex aspects of their business, including acquiring, selling and leasing aircraft in jurisdictions around the world, protecting and securing and enforcing intellectual property rights.
