

Telecommunications

The telecom sector sits at the heart of innovation for many industries. Consumer demand for digital technology and the unstoppable trend towards connectivity ensure the sector will continue to thrive. Beyond increasing sales of new products and services, some telecoms are seeking alliances and partnerships with retail, automotive or healthcare companies to augment capabilities and speed time-to-market. Others may look to merge with media, tech or other vertical industries to develop complex solutions to meet today's needs.

Each of these new directions requires multidisciplinary expertise far beyond what the original telecom companies could have imagined. We are able to provide counsel for today's needs, whether it's working with the local, state, federal or tribal entities to provide counsel on strategic partnerships, navigating byzantine regulatory issues, protecting and defending intellectual property, or business matters such as governance, finance or labor and employment, we have the depth of experience needed to help you succeed for many years to come.
